This Week

Paragraphs of the Week

If the European war continues, New England has a chance for an excellent recreational season next year, according to Stuart D. Paine, secretary of the New England Council's recreational committee. He says that because of the war, American travel in Europe will practically stop and the $214,000,000 spent in overseas travelling will be diverted to home vacations. Claiming New England's charm is one of our most important recreational assets, Mr. Paine says we must retain and improve it. "Since our visitors are most thoroughly impressed by the condition of our towns and highways, we should keep them clean and attractive."

The American Radio Relay League called on its members among the 53,500 licensed amateurs in the United States to listen in on all short wave broadcasts and report at once any suspected violation of America's neutrality policy.

$358,000 was distributed among hundreds of men engaged in catching fish and shellfish along Maine's coast in August. The Sea and Shore Fisheries department also reported 1,264,871 pounds of lobsters were sold to dealers for $177,000 and 161,180 bushels of herring brought $82,000. These were the leading catches.

To forestall any attempt by Bund leader Fritz Kuhn to "skip bail," District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey obtained an increase to $50,000 in the bonds for Kuhn, who awaits trial on larceny charges, alleging theft of $14,648 from the Bund.

Logs, felled by last year's hurricane, are on their way down Rapid River to Umbagog Lake in the first drive since 1927.

Al Smith urges the citizens to "stand firmly behind Roosevelt" in amending the Neutrality Act, while the veteran Massachusetts Senator David I. Walsh says that revision at the present time would be "unneutral" and involve the United States in war.

Senator Wheeler of Montana predicts that President Roosevelt is likely to spend a third term in the White House, "whether we get into the war or not."

The Social Security Board announced the following grants to Maine: $437,569 for the aged; $42,522 for the blind; $60,150 for children.

Attorney General Murphy said the Department of Justice is prepared to act at the appropriate time against certain "conspicuous foreign agents who have been a nuisance." Asked, at his press conference, if this statement applied to the German-American Bund, he replied that he could not say.

It is estimated in Washington naval circles that a Western Hemisphere fleet of more than 350 armed vessels would be available at once to patrol the neutral waters of North and South America. The fleet would be made up of approximately 230 United States ships and about 77 from several Latin-American countries.

Colonel F. E. Harrington, WPA Commissioner, reports 1,732,960 persons on its rolls Sept. 20, an increase of 38,288 over Sept. 13. A peak of 2,400,000 is estimated for the winter months.

The woolen mill at West Buxton, the town's only industrial plant, was destroyed by fire this week. It had recently re-opened after three years of enforced idleness caused by floods. Twenty-five employees were unharmed.

A $20,000 transmitter is to be installed at Quoddy for use in a NYA camp in radio communications operations at its school. The most northerly and easterly in a nationwide hook-up. It will be available for government use in case of national emergency—though planned for training radio technicians.

BRIDGTON ACADEMY J. V. ELEVEN HERE SATURDAY

The Bridgton Academy Junior Varsity football team will be "Parents' Day" foe for the local pigskin toters. The strength of the visitors is not entirely known but something of their defensive strength can be ascertained by scoreless ties which they have played in both their previous starts.

With the experience gained in Gould's initial game with Fryeburg, the Bethel boys should be a sturdier, better conditioned, and smarter group than took the field last week.

The starting backfield will be picked from Clough, Swan, Gavel, Wheeler, Brown, and Tucker. Perry will start at center with the guards being chosen from Roberts, King, Adams, and Bartlett. Abbe will be a sure starter at tackle with Smith, Buck, or Angel getting the nod for the other tackle. The end positions will be ably filled by Wentzel, Palmer, and Cummings.

The game Saturday will start at 2:30 and will be Gould's first engagement on their new Athletic Field.

WEST BETHEL PROPERTY LEASED

Joseph Barber of Auburn has leased of Clarence Bennett the large barn and adjoining field, used for several years as a landing field, together with the former residence of Mr. Bennett at West Bethel. It is understood that Mr. Barber plans to move to West Bethel soon, where he will conduct a sales stable and riding school.

LOCAL GENERAL WELFARE ENTER TO PRESENT FAMOUS SPEAKER FRIDAY EVENING

The Bethel General Welfare Center is fortunate in being able to present an unusual program at the Odd Fellows' dining room Friday evening following the supper. The speaker of the evening will be Jack Barry of Los Angeles, Calif. Although only 19 years old, Barry has become widely known as an outstanding orator and as a national speaker on General Welfare and Social Security subjects. Another popular feature of the program will be moving pictures shown by Jimmy Moore of Norway. These pictures were taken by Mr. Moore in the wilds of South and Central America, and show the life and habits of tribes of head hunters in almost inaccessible regions. The pictures are accompanied by a very informative lecture by Mr. Moore. The entire evening's program is presented free and the public is urged to attend.

BETHEL AND VICINITY

Donald Porter and Howard Austin went to Portland Wednesday, en route to a CCC camp.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Leroy Brown and family attended the fair at Fryeburg Wednesday afternoon.

HE IS AN AMERICAN

(From the New York Sun)

He is an American. He hears an airplane overhead, and if he looks up at all does so in curiosity, neither in fear nor in the hope of seeing a protector.

His wife goes marketing, and her purchases are limited by her needs, her tastes, her budget, but not by decree.

He comes home of an evening through streets which are well lighted, not dimly in blue.

He reads his newspaper and knows that what it says is not concocted by a bureau, but an honest untrammeled effort to present the truth.

He has never had a gas mask on. He has never been in a bomb-proof shelter.

His military training, an R. O. T. C. course in college, he took because it excused him from the gym course, and it was not compulsory.

He belongs to such fraternal organizations and clubs as he wishes.

He adheres to a political party to the extent that he desires—the dominant one, if that be his choice, but with the distinct reservation that he may criticize any of its policies with all the vigor which to him seems proper—any other as his convictions dictate, even, if it be his decision, one which holds that the theory of government of the country is wrong and should be scrapped.

He does not believe, if his party is out of power, that the only way in which it can come into power is through bloody revolution.

He converses with friends, even with chance acquaintances, expressing freely his opinion on any subject, without fear.

He does not expect his mail to be opened between posting and receipt, nor his telephone to be tapped.

He changes his place of dwelling, and does not report so doing to the police.

He has not registered with the police.

He carries an identification card only in case he should be the victim of a traffic accident.

He thinks of his neighbors across international borders—of those to the north as though they were across a State line, rather than as foreigners—of those to the south more as strangers since they speak languages different from his, and with the knowledge that there are matters of difference between his government and theirs, but of neither with an expectancy of war.

He worships GOD in the fashion of his choice, without let.

His children are with him in his home, neither removed to a place of greater safety, if young, nor, if older, ordered ready to serve the State with sacrifice of limb or life.

He has his problems, his troubles, his uncertainties, but all others are not overshadowed by the imminence of battle and sudden death.

He should struggle to preserve his Americanism with its priceless privileges.

He is a fortunate man.

MISS CORA M. BEAN

Miss Cora May Bean of Bethel died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmon Jordan, Lisbon, Sunday after a few hours' illness.

She was the daughter of the late Nathan and Rose Farwell Bean, and was born in Bethel Jan. 22, 1870. She was a graduate of Gould Academy and was a member of the Methodist Church.

She is survived by one brother, William C. Bean of Albany, N. Y.

Funeral services were held at Greenleaf's funeral home Wednesday afternoon, Rev. M. A. Gordon officiating.

FORMER BETHEL FAMILY RETURNING WEST

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sprague and family, for several years residents of Bethel and Newry, are traveling to Arizona in a bus which Mr. Sprague recently purchased for the trip.

Leaving their home in Bath Saturday morning, the family of 15, including a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law, the first destination will be Arizona, on account of Mr. Sprague's health, later going to the Wenatchee Valley in Washington. Mrs. Charles Sprague was formerly Miss Helen Anderson of Bethel.

Mr. Sprague is a native of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Sprague was born in North Bath. After their marriage they went to the state of Washington, where seven of their 10 children were born. They returned to Maine in 1927 and have lived in Pittsburg, Bethel, Newry and Bath.

UPTON STUDENTS VISIT CITIZEN OFFICE

Welcome guests at the Citizen office Wednesday afternoon were the members of the fifth and sixth grades of the Upton school. The visitors were interested in the mechanical end of the newspaper, especially the Linotype, and followed the processes of newspaper making.

The work of labelling at Wyman's corn shop is well under way and will require about a month. A new platform is being put in from the shop to the Grand Trunk siding to enable them to load their cars more easily.

Silas F. Penrose, who has been running lines in Northern Maine for E. S. Cox of Bangor, came to Bethel last week and started for Bangor Thursday. While exploring near the Canadian line, he saw six of the iron posts which are set at intervals to mark the boundary line. The posts are three feet in height and are inscribed, "Treaty of Washington, 1842."

The Bethel Chair Co. is putting up a building near its mill for the protection of its hydrant located there, and for the line of hose which will be maintained for fire purposes. Hose enough will be kept to reach any portion of the buildings.

West Bethel.—Business is closing up here, and the mill will be stopped this week.

GOULD ACADEMY

Gould Academy hopes that all parents will take the opportunity to attend the Tea at Holden Hall on Saturday afternoon after the football game.

All buildings will be open for inspection and competent guides from the student body may be recognized by blue and white ribbons and will be glad to show all visitors through the buildings.

In addition to the Tea, there will be the football game with Bridgton Academy Junior Varsity at 2:30 and the Tea Dance for the young people in the gymnasium after the football game, with music furnished by the Gould Academy Swing Band.

A rally will be held Friday evening at 7:30 in the gymnasium preparatory to the opening home game of the season with the Bridgton Junior Varsity football team. This game also marks the official opening of the athletic field which has been completely rebuilt. No automobiles will be allowed on the field inasmuch as there will be bleacher seats for all who wish to see the game. All patrons are requested to sit on the bleachers or if they do not wish to sit on the bleachers, to go no nearer the field than the running track.

The Girl Reserves of Gould Academy held their first meeting of the year in the Assembly Hall on Wednesday afternoon, October 4th.
The meeting was called to order
by the President, Kathryn Davis.
Everyone joined in singing "Lead,
Kindly Light," followed by the Girl
Reserve Code, after which Miss Stevens explained the purpose of the Girl Reserves. All wishing to become members signed a paper.

Mrs. George Thompson of Bethel gave us a very enjoyable talk about her nine-month tour through the United States covering about 18,000 miles.

The meeting was closed by singing "Follow the Gleam."

COUNTY MINISTERS MET HERE MONDAY

A meeting of the Oxford County Ministers' Association was held at the Bethel Methodist Church Monday. Officers elected are: president, Rev. Walter Colby of Hebron; vice president, Rev. John Singleton of Norway; secretary and treasurer, Rev. George Hunt of South Paris.

Dinner was served at noon by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church, which was followed by a business meeting. Rev. Wilbur I.
Bull of Waterford, chairman of the plans committee, presented tentative plans for the year.

Rev. Herbert T. Wallace of Bethel gave a very interesting review of John Gunther's book, "Inside Europe," which was followed by a discussion.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP CHOSES OFFICERS

At the meeting of the Pilgrim
Fellowship at the Congregational Church Sunday evening the following officers were elected: president, Esther Pike; vice-president, Wilber Bull; secretary-treasurer,
Henry Haley; program committee,
Mary Buck, Ruth Bull, Reginald King, Nancy Arnold and Lucia Packard.

On Wednesday, Sept. 27, Dana Brooks Jr. of Bethel was one of a group of students from Bryant & Stratton Commercial School, Boston, that visited the plant of the Salada Tea Company, Boston. This educational and enjoyable student activity of visiting prominent business concerns is sponsored by the class in Marketing at the School.

As for taking color shots—it's as easy as taking snapshots in black-and-white. You load the film in a suitable miniature camera, set the lens and shutter according to the ex-posure instructions, and shoot. And as long as you follow instructions—you're sure of correctly-exposed color transparencies.

Sooner or later, every real camera fan will be shooting full-color film as well as black-and-white... and will have a projector for showing his color transparencies. It's a really modern way to enjoy pictures... and it's growing in popularity every day. Once you try it, you'll see why.

World Series Sportscasters

GRANTLAND RICE (7), Edwin G. C. Hill (2), Lowell Thomas (3) and Gabriel Heatter (6), a quartet of famous broadcasters and sports experts, will treat baseball fans to the "color stuff", each appearing on a different game, during the World Series starting Oct. 4th at the Yankee Stadium.

Red Barber (1) and Bob Elson (5), two of radio's best known sportscasters will do the play-by-play descriptions of the games and Stan Lomax (4) will take his turn at the mike during each game for the Gillette Safety Razor Company who purchased the World Series broadcasting rights for $100,000 through Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball. These seven men represent the greatest galaxy of personalities ever assigned to cover one sporting event in radio history.

The Series will be heard exclusively over the coast-to-coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting System and throughout the Dominion of Canada. Through short wave facilities the play-by-play reports will be transmitted to Europe, South America, Africa, Cuba, Hawaii and the West Indies.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

GYPS

I STOOD for an hour watching a pitch man coining money. He was selling a useless gadget worth a dime at the ten cent store.

By clothing it with mystery and high-power sales talk he sold this gadget like hot cakes—at a dollar. And the crowd pressed around for more.

I thought it must be wonderful to have a business like that—if only it would last, if only the customers would come back for more. But I knew they wouldn't.

Two days later I passed the doorway where the pitch man had been operating but he had decamped. Where was he? In some other city, probably miles away, going through the same tricks.

These pitch men, almost without exception, die broke. Inspired salesmen, really with a talent for persuading people that amounts to genius, they nevertheless fill pauper's graves, and spend their old age in cheap rooming-houses.

What's the trouble with them?

It isn't hard to find: They do not give value. They depend upon talk to replace quality, tricks to do away with honesty. They lose as every dishonest man must.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—On board the Nord-Express, bound for Ostend, Dr. David Jebb is headed for America. With him is five-year-old Cynthia Thatcher, his temporary ward. On the train they meet Bill Gaines, former classmate of David. Jebb tells Gaines of his passion and of his unconquerable vice—an overwhelming desire for liquor. Jebb feels the urge coming to him again, and wants to safeguard the child, whose father is dead and whose mother awaits her coming in the United States.

CHAPTER II

In the hurrying crisis of his affairs, the loss of his protector stampeded Jebb's usual self-control. His sorrow for Gaines' mishap was nothing to his sorrow for himself and the child.

He dashed into the corridor, shouting to the guard to signal the train to stop. The guard was slow to be found and slower to understand; and once understanding, was aghast at the lèse-majestie of stopping one of the Kaiser's trains simply to pick up a passenger. Besides, had not the passenger all the by the powers that ordained rules disobeyed and from the iron-road-wagon without permission descended?

Jebb would have stopped the train himself, at whatever risk of fine and imprisonment, but there was no bell-scope to pull, and he had failed to note the device installed. His wrath and his anxiety and the necessity of putting them into German, choked him. He was frantic with fear, not for himself, but for the child, whose destinies were once more entirely in his untrustworthy hands.

Cynthia had come out into the corridor and was staring at him in such bewilderment that she forgot to bemoan her oranges. Jebb's face was pitiful. He was in the ultra lonely and fearsome plight of one who cannot trust his own soul.

As he stood, alternately wringing his hands and pleading with the wooden-headed guard, the train, leaping forward toward full headway to make up the lost time, took a sharp curve at high speed, and lurched round it, hurling the child violently along the corridor. Jebb put out one arm to catch her. He got his other hand against the nearest support to steady himself, just as the whipcord snap of the cars sent a heavy door sliding shut.

The whole impact fell on Jebb's thumb. He managed to pull the door back enough to release his hand. He was used to the sight of other people's wounds, but the vision of his own lacerated flesh, and the peculiarly exquisite anguish of a mangled thumb, sent a queasy thrill to his stomach. His knees trembled. He fainted and went toppling and bumping to the floor, where the careening train rolled him like a keg barrel.

Cynthia screamed.

Passengers appeared at all the doors and jammed the corridor. A woman wrapped her arms about the distracted child, who was sobbing.

"Nunkie Dave's dead! Nunkie David's dead!"

A man knelt and raised his head.

"He's fainted, that's all. Has any body got any brandy?"

As Cynthia was withdrawn from the scene, a Frenchman produced a book.

"Je n'ai pas de brandy, monsieur, mais voici du cognac."

"Même chose monsieur," said the American, as he seized Jebb's set teeth apart and forced a liberal gash into his charred thumb.

A shiver quaked through Jebb's whole length, hissing and sputtering. His eyes blazed about feebly.

"What's the matter?"

"You smashed your thumb, old boy, and keeled over. Monsieur here had some brandy handy and I forced it on you."

"No, no!" gasped Jebb helplessly, "not brandy!"

"Yes, and good, too, by the sniff of it. You look a little green, old man. Have some more."

"No!" cried Jebb as he pushed it away.

"You better," said the Yankee, holding it under his nostrils.

"Yes," said Jebb, with a deep breath. He seized the flask greedily and took a generous draught. He offered it back, but as the Frenchman put out his hand, Jebb reconsidered and set the bottle to his lips again.

"En servez-vous!" said the Frenchman ironically.

Jebb took him literally and helped himself liberally.

"You must have a copper-lined throat," said the Yankee, "to swig it straight!"

Jebb gave a further demonstration of his prowess. He sat up on the floor of the car and, winking conceitedly at his fellow-countrymen, drank his good health.

When the flask was again in his hands, the Frenchman turned it upside down with a rueful countenance. Only a drop or two leaked the wrench whose torment was so much beyond her comprehension, she grew fretful of her own account and began to ask for a story. "Tell me a story, Nunkie Dave."

"I don't know any new ones, honey."

"Tell Thimthy about madic carpet."

From his chaotic remembrance of that tangled chaos of countless-colored skins, the "Arabian Nights," Jebb brought out a twisted yarn:

"Once upon a time there was a poor old sailor named Sindbad, and he was sailing across Sahara in a ship of the desert, that is—the back of a camel—you've seen 'em at circuses."

"What with the camelth name, Nunkie Dave?"

"The camel's name was Clarence, I think. And he was thinking of his beautiful little daughter."

"Oh, did the camel have a daughter?"

"No, it's Sindbad I'm speaking of."

"What with her name, Nunkie Dave?"

"The daughter's name was Bridget, I believe—or Patricia, I forget which."

"Where did little Bridget live?"

"See here, young lady, am I telling a story or passing an examination? If you're not careful, I'll make you tell the story. She lived in Constantinople, I believe. Can you spell it?" The curls shook violently. "It's a C and an A and a constantine, and a steeple and a stope and a constantinople."

This old lyric entranced the child and she had to learn it. But, once mastered, she was hot on the trail of Sindbad the sailor. And she forced the frantic mind of Jebb back into the harness. He went on:

"Well, as Sindbad was sailing across the sand and sailing across the sand and a-sailing across the sand what should he see ahead of him but a—a bottle."

The word was out and it was like a knife in Jebb's heart. But he churred on:

"So Sindbad said to the camel, 'Whoa, Dobbin!'"

With the fanatic accuracy of a child in matters of narrative, she insisted:

"Hith name was Clarenth."

"That's right. He said, 'Whoa, Clarence,' and Clarence whoa'd, and Sindbad threw out the rope fire-escape and climbed down and tied Clarence to a hitching post that happened to be standing there, and he picked up the bottle and pulled out the cork with a corkscrew he always carried, and as soon as the cork was out what do you suppose popped out of the bottle?"

"Milk?"

"Not milk but a—ugh! a genie!"

"Whath a genie?"

"A genie is—well, it's—a—er—see that big cloud out there that looks like a giant on a draught-horse? Well, a genie is a terrible being as big as that—a kind of a horrible fairy goblin demon. And he had been corked up in that bottle by an old magician, and he was just aching for some poor fool—or fellow to come along and pull the cork so that he could chew him up."

"Wooh!" gasped Cynthia, cuddling closer.

"That's what the genie said: 'Wooh! You see he had been locked up there about three million hundred years and he was hungry, and he was just going to gobble Sindbad up when—'"

"Umm! Did Mr. Thinpat get scared?"

"Scared! His teeth went clickety-click like this train. But just as the genie was sprinkling some salt on him to make him taste better, Sindbad happened to remember the right charm. He waved his wand and yelled, 'Abracadabra, presto-changeo, sticke-snace!'

"And you should have seen that genie wilt. He got down on the ground and said, 'Please, Massa Sindbad, don't put me in the bottle any more. Let me work for you.' You see, Cynthia, some people have the magic charm, and they can make the bottle-genie work for them and cheer them up and be their slave, but other poor fellows don't know the word, and they become the genie's slaves."

Cynthia, like most of her sex, was not for moralizing, but for plot. So Jebb went on:

"Sindbad said, 'Look here, you black rascal, I want to get home and see my little daughter Susie—'"

"Her name ish Bridget."

"My daughter Bridget, and I want to get home quick. D'youn understand?" And the genie said, "Yes, Massa Sindbad, you're going to be da in a jiffy."

"Whath a Jiffy, Nunkie?"

"That's something I never could find out, honey. But the genie knew and he brought out a magic carpet."

"Did he have it in his pocket?"

"He must have had."

"How could he get a carpet in a bottle?"

"You'll have to ask him. Genies are very peculiar. But he brought it out and spread it on the ground, and said, 'All aboard!'—and Sindbad stepped on it, and the genie said, 'Hold fast!' and rang the bell twice, and the next moment Sindbad found himself at home in Constantinople, and his little girl—what do you suppose was the first thing she said?"

"She said, 'What did you bring me for a prethent?'"

"That's just what she said. And her father said to the genie, 'Here, you black rascal, what did we bring the little girl?' And the genie took out of his suitcase the most beautiful—but here we are at Cologne, honey. Let's get out and take a breath of air and see the Cathedral."

Cynthia, like many another, cared more for the architecture of event than of stone. She insisted:

"But what did the genie bring the little girl?"

"We'll open the suitcase when the train starts again. It will do us good, honey, to stretch our legs a bit."

Jebb was impatient to be moving. He could not imagine what was in the suitcase, and he felt that if he sat in the train another moment he would leap through the window and carry the glass flying.

Twirling Cynthia by the hand he descended from the car, leaving all their hand-luggage except the small Gladstone containing the precious drawings. This he carried in gingerly manner, his turbaned thumb yelping with pain at the slightest jar.

Learning that the train would rest at Cologne some minutes, he struck out across the platform. Cynthia was hungry; the loss of the oranges had whetted her appetite. There was a refreshment room in the station, but Jebb thought they would better step outside and take a look at the Cathedral towering above them like a storm cloud.

Of all the eyes that have stared at that carved mountain in the many centuries since it began to upheave its mass above the town, not many eyes could have regarded it with less observation. The child's thoughts were turned inward upon the fascinating mysteries of the gift the genie brought to Miss Bridget Sindbad. Jebb's eyes ran here and there like foxes in a cage, with the restlessness of a man in torment.

His shifty gaze was caught by the sign of the Dom Hotel, with the coffee-house adjoining. People were seated at tables. Some of them were reading the papers one finds there.

All of them had some liquor before them. Jebb shivered with desire, his knees wavered. The genie of alcohol was fuming from the bottle and he knew no subduing charm.

It usurped his will. He could not wish to subdue it. Everything on earth became a mirage, the two things real were the thirst consuming him, and the relief at hand.

Throwing off irresolution as something contemptible he stalked majestically across the street, the little girl toddling alongside, hand-pabisus aequis.

She never questioned the probity of her guide. If she felt a little fear that they were going too far it was lost in her trust of Nunkie Dave. She made one comment as her feet pattered across the rough cobbles of the city:

"It don't smell like cologne, Nunkie Dave."

A voice came from his high-held head:

"So Coleridge said, honey."

She panted as she ran:

"Who wath he, Nunkie Dave?"

"He was the man who wrote the Ancient Mariner."

"Who wath he, Nunkie Dave?"

"He was the man who slew the albatross."

"Whath a albatroth, Nunkie Dave!"

It was a beautiful bird, honey, and the man that killed it suffered horribly of thirst. You must never, never slay the albatross, honey—never slay the albatross. It's the unpardonable crime."

Strolling along the Domhof, Jebb and Cynthia soon reached the Dom Hotel. Jebb took the child to the dining-room, told an elderly waiter to bring her what she wanted, cautioned her not to stir till he came back, and kissing her good-by, made straight for the wine-room.

Cynthia had never heard of Casablanca, but she clutched his grit. She and the waiter, who spoke a little dining-room English, and had five or six little Kindchen of his own, became great friends. It was a pleasanter place to wait than on a burning deck, but Cynthia's appetite was soon sated, the waiter speedily emptied his English vocabulary, and his bag of tricks for amusing a child jaded with delay. And still Jebb did not return. Loneliness for her playmate, and terror for his loss, agitated the child, and she was fretting.

"I want Nunkie Dave! I want Nunkie Dave!" And then, that cry failing, she began to whimper:

"I want my mamma!"

At last Jebb arrived at the door of the dining-room. Cynthia precipitated herself across the floor with a shriek of joy that disturbed the solemn room. The waiter followed to explain with much joviality and some policy, how long and well he had entertained his charge.

"I want my mamma!"

Leaving the voluminous waiter palpitant with admiration, Jebb took Cynthia's hand and they went back to the station. In his other hand he still grasped the Gladstone.

His manner to the child was one of lofty tenderness, of the courtesy an ancient knight would have shown a lady of high degree, mingled with the absentmindedness of a poet whose thoughts were busied with some great theme.

"Seems to me, honey, that the train was headed other way when we left. Prob'lly—prob'lly I'm mistaken. Get turned round easily in foreign countries."

In his eagerness to board the train he tried to walk over and through a gorgeous officer who looked to be at least a taker of cities instead of tickets. On demand Jebb brought out his pocketbook and produced the remainder of a ticket and a half to Ostend.

He was informed that his train was. "Vor langer Zeit gegangen."

With an air of angelic patience Jebb informed the man, whom he called "Mein lieber General," that he desired and intended to take the train standing before him. The guard, greatly touched by the title (he had been a soldier, of course), informed the distinguished sir that the train was no longer the Nord-Express, but the Ostend-Vienna Express and that other tickets would be required.

Jebb replied that that made nothing to him out, and went to the ticket office where, in German of surprising correctness, he called for one and one-half tickets. The man in the cage naturally inquired, though in less aristocratic German:

"Please, for what station, my sir?"

Jebb smiled airily and quoted a remembered line.

"What stations have you?"

The beard within waved like wheat and the ticket-seller answered with a laugh.

"Frankfort-am-Main, Homburg, Wurzburg."

"Wurzburg, eh? That tastes good to me. (Das schmeckt mir gut.)"
